MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 25, 1394

ELECTRICAL DISASTERS.-Governor O'Ferrall on Saturday received the following disturbing, not to say startling, letter from New York. The remarkable temperature of the day gave color f not confirmation to the theory promulgated:

NEW YORK, June 22, 1894. Ion. Chas. T. O'Ferrall, Governor of Virginia: Dear Sir:—The extent to which the nation Dear Sir:—The extent to which the nation is using electricity is most seriously affecting the atmosphere, and consequently again, both animal and vegetable life. La Grippe was unquestionably caused by the action of artificial electricity upon the oxygen, giving to it an alotropic character. The use of electricity has thus ruined the life of many, sent tens of thousands into uptimely graves, and caused thousands into untimely graves, and caused loss by fire, storm and flood of hun treds of nil-lions of dollars worth of property, and without one word of protest from the press or govern-ment is still permitted to continue its devilish work of death and destruction. There is a fearful reconsilidity resting somewhere. For work of death and destruction. There is a fearful responsibility resting somewhere. For more than six years the most remarkable weather and meteorological phenomena ever known attests the truth of the propositions in my work now about ready for publication, which I have been several years completing, and which is now in the hands of my amannensis. * * And a copy of which is subject to your order by your paying the cost of typ writing it, as it is not deemed advishe to publish it yet.
